PHILBY WAS SPY, SON TELLS BRITONS

London — Harold Philby, a former top intelligence official in London and Britain's top link with the CIA, was a Russian spy for 34 years, his son said on a radio-television broadcast here. The elder Philby, who told his son about his spy career during the youth's recent visit to Moscow, had been named as the third man in the Burgess-MacLean defection in 1951 and reportedly tipped off the two Soviets so they could flee behind the Iron Curtain.
